Hi All

Since sending the first note on this thread I have gotten a little too busy (with our email problems adding to the situation). I thought I had a nice short window of time then but it did not work out that way. Will follow up on this as soon as I have time. But I do have a gut response to Kenny's recommendation not based on science--I think we are better off sending out a short general paper and then follow up with another one that is formaldehyde based. This is based on the constraints on my time nowadays and my expectation that getting anything out (internally or externally) on formaldehyde is not going to be easy, while at the same time recognizing that something needs to get out there sooner rather than later.

Ravi.
